Principal's Letter

To the Class of June, 1928:

The laurels of the day well crown June, 1928. Lewis and Clark's largest class, it is agreed, has become at graduation its most representative one. Diversity of achievement, scholastic honor, athletic prowess, undaunted courage and distinctive spirit have characterized its history. Thus has the class built itself into the school and epitomized the Lewis and Clark ideal.

The faculty finds happiness as it joins me in wishing you, individually and collectively, a great measure of joy, success, honor, long life.

—Henry M. Hart

Kenneth Albert Brooks
1911-1928

In memory of a friend and classmate whose life, though signalized by brevity of years, was lived to a completion in its unselfishness of devotion and its richness of content and example.

Class History

IN SEPTEMBER, 1924, some four hundred freshmen were systematically introduced to Lewis and Clark High School by big sisters and members of the Courtesy Committee. It was an eventful day, indeed! We did not, however, become aware of our extent and power in this institution until the first freshman convocation was held. At this time, Mr. Hart (who apparently has the eye of a prophet) announced that he was addressing the largest and most promising class in the history of the school.

It was this same morning that we first viewed the great pipe organ. For the preceding four years, the organ had been the talk of the community, and even in the distant recesses of the grade schools mysterious phrases concerning a $26,000 organ fund had been heard. We knew the last payments for it had been made several months before our arrival, and we felt insignificant that we had not had the opportunity to aid in paying for this beautiful instrument from which we were to derive so much benefit. We were able to recover our pride and enthusiasm, however, when Mr. Hart inaugurated a new and even more extensive student project—the playfield. This great enterprise is financed entirely within the school with no outside solicitation. Every year the amount due is reached by class and club pledges and gifts from the faculty.

It was delightful indeed for most of us to find ourselves Sophomores the next year. We were now able to appreciate more fully the humor column of The Journal which loses no opportunity to immortalize the ignorance of the Frosh.

This was a most enjoyable year. The talent of the members of this class was just coming into evidence. There was an excess of school spirit. The football bazaar, sponsored by the Girls' Federation, was a grand success, as usual. And, we won the big game with North Central—an epic indeed.

During the following year we merely waited quietly (the only proper thing to do) until we were Seniors. An exciting class election was the first feature and the following officers were chosen: David Weideman, president; Joe Mackoff, vice-president; John Dimeling, secretary; and Grace McIntosh, treasurer.

We were just becoming accustomed to permanent library cards and to fairly good convocation seats (left section, first floor) when we suddenly found ourselves Senior A's.

It was with no little enthusiasm that we found that we had outgrown room 107. We gathered in the auditorium to elect David Weideman, president; Lois Marsh, vice-president; John Dimeling, treasurer; Helen Olsen, assistant treasurer; Grace McIntosh, secretary; and Kenneth McClusky, sergeant-at-arms.

Rev. Mr. Van Winkle was chosen to deliver the baccalaureate address.

The work of the Girls' Federation has been outstanding in its advancement of school activities, and its success this semester is assured with Bonnie Moore as president of a now exceedingly well organized body.

This semester marks the beginning of the Boys' Federation which has chosen for its first president, Bill Kilby.

The class play, "Merton of the Movies," directed by Miss Reely, was a delightful success. This was a more elaborate play than is customarily attempted, and the class is proud of the results.

With so much accomplished and with our diplomas only a few weeks in the future, we are even now seriously considering the duties of alumni.

Class Will

WE, THE class of June, nineteen hundred and twenty-eight, of the Lewis and Clark High School, of the city of Spokane, the county of Spokane, and the State of Washington, being of unlawful age, of as sound and disposing mind and memory as could be expected, and not acting under duress, menace, or undue influence of any person whomsoever except of our worthy faculty, do make, publish, and declare this our Last Will and Testament, in manner following, that is to say:

First, we hereby revoke all former Wills made by us.

Second, we, a class passing on into an unknown existence, do hereby direct that Charon be duly paid for the transporting of this June class across the River Styx and the placing of it in suitable schools and institutions of higher learning.

Item 1. To Mr. Hart we will all the surplus money of our treasury to be used toward the playfield funds. We are sure this will lift a great burden from his shoulders.

Item 2. To the entire faculty we leave our dignified manners in the cafeteria line in order that they may at least get a glimpse of the quickly disappearing liver and bacon.

Item 3. To all our under classmates we leave our entire collection of grape gum, but we refuse to disclose its place of concealment until our diplomas are in hand.

Item 4. To the classes of '29 we leave our favorite haunts in the library, together with the tranquil atmosphere we created there. If you are in doubt as to which corner it was, just ask Miss Stout; she knows.

Item 5. To the Juniors we bequeath our rapidly declining knowledge of Chemistry which consists solely of H^2O to date. We knew that before we took it.

Item 6. To the Sophomores we leave our benign spirits preserved in alcohol (along with the other specimens in Botany and "Zoo").

Item 7. To the little "Frosh" we leave any remaining traces of green (nature's own color). We hope gangrene doesn't set in.

Item 8. David Wiedeman, our worthy class president, bequeaths his ever serene smile and flaming locks to the girlhood of the school.

Item 9. "Ray" Gimble, Louis Powell, and Harry Pozner will their favorite parking (and sparking) places on the Appleway to Bill Wolfe, Helen Wolfe, and all the other wolves.

Item 10. Edna Mae Endslow, Margaret Anthony, Ruth Jones, Gertrude Falls, and Flora Corkery will their petite (?) figures to Jean Logan, Bernice Casey, Lulah Shaw, Marjorie Johnston, and Dolores Hangauer.

Item 11. Dorothea Towne and Elizabeth Dillon will their "Vachel Lindsayness" to all the L. C. boys needing assistance in their annual spring poetry. You all know how it is. When spring comes "a young man's fancy lightly turns to (?) well "Nuff" said.

Item 12. Dorothy Dobbins and Harri de Mers bequeath their long tresses to George Wallace. If George should ever be cornered in a two story building, there is no question as to how he would make his escape.

Item 13. Marie Christenson, Letha State, Roger Hicks, Juelle Atkinson, and Bob Dressel will and bequeath their "Blondex Shampoo," of surprising strength and quality to one-half of the "would-be-blondes," who desire halos of shining, straw-colored gold. To the remaining half, Aida Mary Little unwillingly bequeaths her "Henna Shampoo," specially made and sold by Howard Leendersteen.

Item 14. Mary Fenstermacher, Helen Baker, Elizabeth Brazeau, Bonnie Beaudry, and Nita Crane will all their old library slips, written and oral excuses, and book-fine notices to Marjorie Hoag, Lillian Meinhardt, Caroline Rogers, Norene Pierce, and Carry Jorganson. Here's hoping Miss Stout won't notice the change of signature on the library slips. As for the written excuses—well we can only wish you luck and courage. No doubt you will need the latter when you come in contact with the "two L. C. suspenders" (Mr. Fry and Mr. Troth).

Item 15. Ross Bryan, Lorenzo True, Fred Adams, "Herbie" Gerrish, and John McAllister bequeath their ardent love of paying for playfields, pipe organs, and the like to the tiny freshmen. They wish to add, as consolation, the fact that when the playfield is paid for, a huge and expensive stadium will loom upon the horizon. Courage little "frosh!" Have courage!

Item 16. Katherine Kearns, Helen Olsen, Mildred Carey, Eva Davey, Myra Cornett, Minnie Costanzo, Anna Hindin, Ann Napuk, Dorothy Van Winkle and Lota White will their ability to "skin the cat" and to climb ropes to the sophomore boys for their neighborhood circuses next summer. These girls wish to state that if you need any assistance, Miss Balte-zore will render her services freely.

Item 17. Kenneth McCluskey (our football star) wills his talent as a "high kicker" to Mary Bevan to use in her dancing.

Item 18. Nevin Tanner leaves his art of tickling the "ivories," to the two little "unsophisticates," Ila Smith and Helen Friedman.

Item 19. Mary Marks, Eloise Neilson and Marie Watson will their much used adage that "gentlemen prefer blonds" to Helen Jane Solberg, Anna Wickstrand and Myrtle Christianson. Fortunately for us brunettes, all those of the opposite sex are not gentlemen.

Item 20. Leo Carde, our class "Rudolph Valentino," wills his "skin you love to touch" to three little girls who are certain to make good use of it: Ila Ward, Mary Brown, and Nancy Luhn. Of course we are not insinuating that anyone makes a practice of touching Leo—but—But then you can never tell.

Item 21. Bonnie Moore, the Girls' Federation President, wills her fifty-seven varieties (boy friends understood) to all the Junior girls to replenish their collection.

Item 22. The brilliant (?) scholars of the Classical department leave their much used "ponies" of Caesar, Cicero, and Virgil to the other struggling "studes" of said department. You should have no trouble in passing as our ponies have long since grown into strong and hard-pulling horses through active service.

Item 23. Grace MacIntosh bequeaths to her ever faithful "John" a pair of her much used galoshes as a fond remembrance of the days when he struggled desperately to remove them from his "lady-love's" feet. Now, John, please do not attempt to wear them.

Item 24. Carol Seeds, Pauline Anderson, Helen Witherspoon, and Muriel Irving bequeath their "Patrick Henry Ability" to Virginia Lambert, Jean Davis, Elaine Cash, and Jo Piolette. We are certain that with these combined forces there will be nothing lacking in volume.

Item 25. Beatrice Clay and James Watkins (valedictorian and salutatorian respectively) bequeath their "Byronic" noses and "elephantic" ears to Mary Bower and Ervin Seale to assist in the process of absorption so that maybe they may receive like honors, having the advantage of taking in great volumes of knowledge at one time.

Item 26. Delia Sisson, Oma Sanders, and Caroline Claeson will their "go get 'em ways" (in ad selling) to Ella Shoemaker and Gladys Kepler.

Item 27. Leonard Kuhn wills his "lemon juice diet" to all those desiring practice in squeezing lemons. Alma happens to be a very sweet girl. S'pose that's why he's so generous.

Item 28. "Dick" Nelson, "Dick" Armstrong, Ned Klein, and Laurence Pence will their ability to plan treasure hunts, covering unfrequented roads, cow paths, and graveyards, to all those desiring a real thrill next Hallowee'n.

Item 29. Esther Weinstein wills her terra-cotta rose cheeks and her soft crimson lips to Catherine Dowling. We are sure Catherine will make good use of them.

Item 30. Joe Mackoff, Howard Altnow, Bob Phillips, and Robert Briscoe bequeath their "fatal smiles" to Byron Johnson, Wallace Dimon, and all others desiring a good "stand in" with the feminine population of the school.

Item 31. John Dimeling, another worthy Senior, wills his "fast ways" to "Bob" Wallace. Now don't get our little "Johnny" wrong. He just likes to drive fast—that's all.

Item 32. Marjorie Belknap, Jane McNutt, "Jackie" Johnson, and Jean Born will their long continued and heated debate that "Cleopatra was a decided brunette" to Elizabeth Hewitt, Evelyn Little, Mary Elizabeth Forcum, and Martha Lee Taylor. Here's hoping the "blackheads" win.

Item 33. Harry Chisholm unwillingly bequeaths his drunken accent of his "f"s and "s"s to Jack Lambert. All of us who know Jack are sure that his cultivated speech needs no additions along this line.

Item 34. Caroline McCallum and Virginia Renz (our two boyish bobs) will their raven locks and purple eyes to "Dick" Mohrmann and "Buddie Marks."

Item 35. Jack Duggan, Reuben Newcomb, Bob Brewer, and Grant Barret will their "school girl complexion" to "Don" McKean, Jack McIntosh, George Atkinson, and Thurston Berglund.

Item 36. Harry Hoffman bequeaths his excellent opinion of himself to Paul Schedler. Don't be surprised if Paul doesn't as much as give you a look from now on.

Item 37. The two "Kennys" Roberts and Newcomb, will their "modest blush" to the timid freshmen to use when they discover they are in the wrong class room.

Lastly, we hereby nominate, appoint, and constitute Mr. Henry Charles Godfrey Fry to be the executor of this our last Will and Testament, duly recorded and signed in the absence of witnesses, whereof, we have hereunto set our hand and seal, this fourth day of March, in the year of our Lord, One Thousand Nine Hundred Twenty-eight.

Athletics

*3 - The brightest of many kinds.
good luck.
J. G. McMacken*

Athletic Director

E. L. Hunter, new director of athletics at Lewis and Clark. "Squinty" is not new to the students of the school, as he coached the basketball team to three city titles from 1923 to 1926, and also to one state title. During his leave of absence in 1927, he turned out a winning freshman quintet at the University of St. Louis. He has under his direction a crew of capable and efficient coaches.

They are:

P. G. Hupperten, swimming and cross country mentor who coached his natators to victory over the North Central swimmers this season. "Pete" has been associated with the athletic department of Lewis and Clark since 1918.

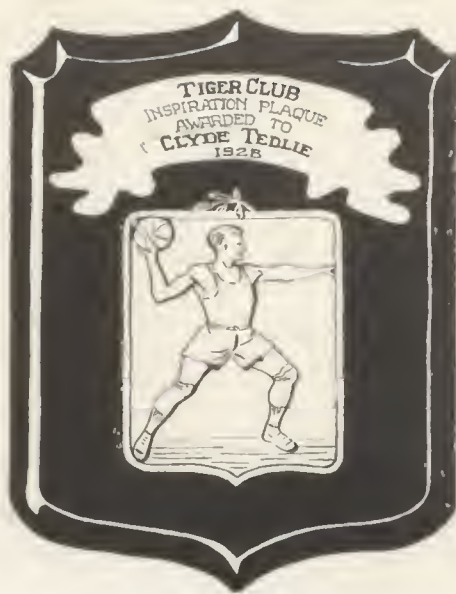

Harlow H. Campbell, baseball coach has been with the Tiger diamond men for the last two seasons. He was handicapped by the lack of star pitchers last year, but developed a string of hard-hitting boys, most of whom are back on the team against this year.

J. G. McMacken started coaching the Lewis and Clark rifle team in 1914. He has helped many of the team members in winning their sharpshooter and marksman medals.

Neal D. Nelson, coach for the last two years of the basketball team, has charge of the track men this season.

James Murdoch who takes the place of H. C. G. Fry as tennis mentor, has learned the game in college competition.

Sidney McLaughlin, new football coach, shows promise of turning out scrappy and tough pigskin-chasers.

The Plaque Award

In order to encourage teamwork and sportsmanship among the athletes of Lewis and Clark, the Tiger Club is the donor of the Tiger Inspiration Plaque, which is awarded annually to the individual in each of the four major sports, football, baseball, basketball, and track, who is voted by his teammates the most inspirational player of the team.

Awarded for the first time in the school year of 1927 to 1928, the winners of the plaque in football and basketball are:

Football_____Arthur Taylor
Basketball_____Clyde Tedlie

The winners of the other two sports were not yet announced when the Tiger went to press.

Back Row—Gunnar Engstrom, Dick Smith, Leonard Kuhn, Dan Aukett, and Edwin Bowker.

Baskethall

Although Lewis and Clark lost the city basketball title to North Central for the first time in five years, the Tiger quintet had an otherwise successful season. They were not beaten by any other team and lost only three games out of fourteen. The Orange and Black hoopsters scored 435 points to their opponents 274.

Coach Neal D. Nelson's charges have to their credit two wins each over Cheney high school, Coeur d'Alene, Walla Walla, Hillyard, and Gonzaga. They won the first game of the N. C.—L. C. five game series, but dropped three straight games to the North-siders.

Leonard Kuhn, star center, was chosen captain by his teammates. Clyde Tedlie, unanimous choice for all-city honors, and also leading scorer, received the Tiger Inspiration Plaque in recognition of his value to the team.

Six men received the letter S. They are: Gerald Stannard, forward; Dan Aukett, guard; Leonard Kuhn, center; Clyde Tedlie, guard; Dick Smith, forward; and Edwin Bowker, forward.

First Row Eugene Kane, Leslie Paine, Richard Boyd, Axel Strand,

Second Row Jack McIntosh, Galen Buckles, Robert Phillips, Thomas Quinn, Howard Allison,

Third Row Bob Williams, Jack Mott, Donald Chamberlain, Jack Lambert, Fred Williams
Kenneth Manchester, and Paul Schedler, manager.

Back Row Lorenzo Trne, Bob Pratt, Dan Leary, Earl Geneck, Herbert Princehouse, Winston Phillips.

Swimming

In one of the closest and most exciting swimming meets ever staged between the two high schools, the Lewis and Clark mermen upset the dope bucket to splash their way to a 30 to 29 point victory over the much touted North Central natators.

Four new city high school records were hung up, two going to the Tigers and two to the Indians. The record-breaking L. C. relay team composed of Harold Porter, Fred Williams, Earl Geneck, and Robert Brewer travelled the course in 1:27:4. Jack Lambert set a record in the 100 yard back stroke, and placed second in the 220 yard dash. His time for the 100 was 1:19.9. Earl Bowman of North Central set records in the 100 yard free style and the 220 yard dash.

The team as a whole followed Coach Peter Hupperten's advice and their teamwork did much to enable them to win over their stronger rivals.

The Baseball Team

First Row—Garner Coon, Fred Minnis, William Triplett, Gordon Hoaglund, Clarence Burger.

Second Row—Alexander Ward, Robert Grant, Edwin Bowker, Howard Bernstein, Clyde Tedlie, Frank Burke.

Third Row—Coach Campbell, Carl Nydell, Gunnar Engstrom, James Howells, Arleigh White, John Dahl, and Hans Juckland.

Baseball

Early season baseball games gave promise of a winning baseball nine. Coach Campbell's veterans, most of whom were new at the game last year have developed into a hard-hitting ball club.

One of the outstanding pitchers is Frank Burke. He pitches a heady game, and allows the opposing batters only a few scattered hits. Edwin Bowker and Howard Berntsen are both consistent performers on the mound.

Gerald Stannard, first baseman, plays a fast game and is one of the heaviest hitters on the team.

Arleigh White at short scoops up the hot ones in a masterly manner. He also alternates at third with Alexander Ward.

Gordon Hoaglund, last year's catcher, can hold Burke's fast-est with ease. His excellent receiving is one of the features of the games.

Is one of the most successful girls ever met. I saw her at the girls' baseball game. She was a great hit of luck.

The Track Team

First Row—Bob Blair, Malcolm Sharp, Ned Dressel, George White, Harold Fluno, William O'Neil, Ivar Forsberg, Don Harvey, Elton Deno, and Bill Boyd.

Second Row—Robert Beanpre, Dick Fairbanks, Marvill Griffith, Arthur Duncan, Kenneth Roberts, Bertal Eklund, John Gation, Ralph Buell, and Lawrence Falick.

Third Row—Walter Fidler, Harold Hawley, Robert Leendersten, Avin Hobbs, Edwin Atchison, Frank Buell, Jack Doyle, Jess Cooper, Ben Donoho, and Reinhold Pearson.

Fourth Row—Coach Nelson, August Eltee, Charles Potts, Paul McReynolds, manager, Bill W. Boyd, Orville Elton, Olaf Amdahl, and Kenneth Leendersten.

Fifth Row—John George, assistant manager.

Track

Somewhat crippled by the loss of Paul Swift, crack sprinter and broad jumper, the Lewis and Clark track team faced a hard season.

George White, last year's track captain, is bearing the burden of running the high and low hurdles and the 100 yard dash. Graduation took most of the Tiger timber toppers.

Kenneth Roberts, who set a new record in winning the cross country race 1927, is one of the fastest milers and half-milers in the city.

Edwin Atchison, holder of the city record in the high jump, is handling both his event and the pole-vault this year. Ned Dressel is also vaulting.

In the 220 yard dash, Malcolm Sharp and Wilson Hall are fast men. They also do the running broad jump.

Leonard Kuhn and Edwin Bowker are two of the best weight men in the four city high schools. In a practice meet with Hillyard high school, both of them heaved the discus farther than the city record. John Gation is showing promise in the field events.

Merton of the Movies

MERTON OF THE MOVIES," the Senior Class Play of June, 1928, was presented in the high school auditorium, March 23, 1928. The play deals with a small town boy who, believing himself to be undiscovered talent, goes to Hollywood in order to give the world pictures of a "finer nature." He goes to Hollywood where he finds, much to his surprise, that casting directors are not clamoring for new talent. While trying to secure work, he meets Flips Montague, a young lady who though thoroughly versed in the ways of Hollywood finds in her heart a soft spot for this aspiring Mr. Clifford Armytage. Merton, it seems, went to Hollywood with the sole desire of playing with Beulah Baxter, whom he believes in his simple-mindedness to be "the little wonder woman of the silver screen," but whom he later calls "a beautiful moron." As in the proverbial story book, the Montague girl is Beulah Baxter's double and all the feats of daring that Merton has been admiring as the works of Beulah are suddenly transferred to the credit of Flips. Merton is finally after many disappointments given a job playing in what he believes to be serious drama but which is in reality pure comedy, all through the work of the Montague girl. At the premier of his first picture he is heart-broken, but is finally won around to doing what God meant him to do" at a salary of four hundred dollars a week. And of course the Montague girl is the lucky one, of whom Merton chooses to say, "She is not only my best pal but my severest critic."

Bill Kilby for his portrayal of Merton deserves unending praise. The same may be said of Dorothea Towne, who played the Montague girl. Both "Dot" and "Bill," as some interested onlooker said, "put it over the footlights." Grace McIntosh as the aspiring scenario-writing milliner; Leslie Murray as the small town Beau Brummel, and Harry Pozner as the kind but movie-hating Gashwiler, made Merton's home town, Simsbury, seem most realistic. Minnie Heral as the casting director; Leo Carde as Director Rosenblatt; Howard Alnow and Jack Duggan as the cameraman, were enough to discourage the bravest heart that aspired to the silverscreen. The most conscientious extra might well have been discouraged and inspired at the same moment by the glories of Delbert McClure as Harold Parmalee. Muriel Irving as Beulah Baxter and John Dimeling and Henry Anderson as her chauffeurs, along with Beatrice

Clay as her maid Edna Mae Endslow, and Lawrence Pence, as Muriel Mercer and "Pa" Montague, respectively, gave the decided impression of having been at this acting game a long time. Bob Grant played the part of Jeff Baird, the Buckeye Comedy King, with a clever hand. Ruth Swann's motherly attitude was directed not only on Merton but extended beyond the play in the form of general aid to everybody at all times. Joe Schopf, as Mr. Walberg, finally won Merton to his way of thinking, but we think we could too if we ran around with offers of four hundred dollars a week; however, we must admit that he could with his appearance and conversation convince anyone. Laureat Martineau, as Max the violinist, did much to add to the effectiveness of many scenes.

During the Last Eighteen Years

ONE FINE June morning—it was June 20, 1910, to be exact, the old South Central High School building was destroyed by fire. Henry M. Hart, who had become the principal of the high school in the fall of 1907, heard of the fire on his way to the summer school and reached the scene in time to save all of the records and three office chairs, the gift of a graduating class to Principal Hart.

Practically all of the pictures, which were among the finest in the city, were lost; and most of the books in the library were destroyed.

The next day summer school was transferred to the North Central building, and in the fall the two schools continued to use the one building jointly. For a year and a half all Spokane high school students attended North Central, but the south side pupils received South Central diplomas.

Plans for a new school were started promptly and a meeting was held to decide on a name for a new school. Many favored the old South Central, but others felt that a more vivid and appropriate name should be selected. Lewis and Clark was the suggestion of Principal Hart, and it met with great enthusiasm on the part of the patrons of the school.

Many notable persons were present at the laying of the cornerstone of the new high school in the spring of 1911. Some of these were: Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States; Marion E. Hay, Governor of the State of Washington; Miles Poindexter, United States Senator; H. B. Dewey, State Superintendent of Schools; Bruce M. Watson, City Superintendent of Schools; W. W. Hindley, Mayor of Spokane; and Principal Henry M. Hart.

When the building was completed a huge house-warming, lasting a week was held.

During this time the first high school alumni reunion in Spokane was held. On the reception committee were: Principal Henry M. Hart, Miss Etta Reed, Mr. I. C. Libby, Mr. J. L. Dunn, Mr. James W. Buchanan, Miss Corinth L. Crook, and Mrs. Olive B. Jones.

On April 8, 1912, school was first conducted in the new building. Within twenty minutes the school had been organized and set in running order. At that time the student body numbered 1200.

While the building was in the course of construction many friends of the school, and various graduating classes had arranged to make art gifts so as to add to the beauty of the corridors.

About five years after the occupation of the building, war was declared and nearly seventy boys left school to volunteer. Many of these boys returned to school after the struggle and were graduated.

Shortly after Armistice Day one of the most memorable convocations in the history of the school was held. At this meeting Charles d'Urbal, French instructor, suggested erecting a memorial to the twenty-two former students of Lewis and Clark who made the supreme sacrifice for the love of their country. The idea was heralded by a rush to the stage, and a thousand dollars was pledged within the next ten minutes. An exclusive New York firm created the beautiful memorial which is now to be found in the main entrance of the building, and which is, undoubtedly, the most exquisite work of its kind in this section of the country.

It was about this time that H. H. Henneford, vice-principal of the school, proposed the erection of a pipe organ in the auditorium. Three years were devoted to the raising of $21,000 to purchase the beautiful organ which was then installed. Judson Waldo Mather, who had been residing in the East, came back to Spokane in time to be employed as the school organist.

The next big step in the history of our school was the decision to purchase fifty-two acres of land up on the hill to use as a school playfield. As this project plays such a big part of our lives today, the details are known by everyone and will not be repeated here.

And now having noticed the changes which have been made in the history of Lewis and Clark during the past eighteen years, one cannot help but wonder what as many more years will bring.

Pierrot

UDDENLY and unexpectedly I came to be. Amber says she sang softly to herself as she fashioned my face out of a piece of stocking of a color erroneously called flesh, and made me a Pierrot suit of a dear velvet dress with silver ruffles. Nearly as large as herself she fashioned me. She stuffed me with letters and small remembrances of Barry, and she painted my face and hands, then held me up to the glass to show me myself.

"Poor Pierrot!" she whispered.

Aunt Cowfold drafted another announcement for the newspapers. I heard very little about it, save that his name was Dick. Amber showed me his photograph, but I did not make much of that, for to Pierrot one man's face is as good as another. Beautiful things Amber and Barry used to say to each other, and it made me sad that I was only a jazz Pierrot doll and no one would say such things to me.

Amber said goodby to Barry and was married to Dick. They took me to Paris with them. There was something agreeable about Dick. He was a very quiet man, with a charming laugh, and he also loved Amber far more than he ever managed to tell her. However, he took us all over the one-time battle fields of France and told us a lot about them. We saw the places where men had expended much thought and hard cash in blowing each other to bits, and then the places where they had concentrated upon putting one another together again, and no expense spared. I think at that time I was glad to be nothing but a jazz Pierrot doll with a stocking face.

Amber seldom listened to Dick when he talked. I do not think she was very happy. Sometimes she laid her head on me and cried and whispered things, wild horses shall never drag from me, for I also have my finer feelings.

Then came the episode of the indiscriminating housemaid. They told her to clean out the rubbish and the rags in the sewing room. She did. I think she was thinking of the postman, whom I had often seen her kiss, when she tipped me headfirst into a rag bag.

There, head downward, I did pass away a dreary winter, forgotten by the entire world. Amber found me on a spring morning.

"Why, Pierrot!" she cried. "Oh, how you do need ironing out."

Dulled as my perceptions were by a winter spent in a rag bag, it was clear to me that things had been happening in that house. Amber carried me to a small bed and introduced me to a small bundle of sweetness with an endearing way about it, which she called "little Dick."

Then Dick left on a flying trip. The house indeed became sad, and with this came the return of Barry who forced his attentions on Amber until she loathed him. This desire for Amber became stronger when the news arrived that Dick had been lost at sea. I resented his unwelcome attentions to her very much and then often wished I was larger.

One night the moon rode high in the sky, like a silver boat in the treetops. Amber was asleep, and little Dick lay peacefully alongside. As I sat in my usual place in the window seat, pondering over many things someone came up the creeper like a cat and leaned over the window sill until his face was almost touching mine; it was Barry. His eye was certainly wild.

Amber awoke when he reached the foot of the bed. I flung myself from the window seat to give her a warning. He ordered her to put on her clothes and go with him. This she angrily refused to do. Suddenly they both stood transfixed, for someone in the empty chair began to smoke a pipe. It was Dick. No one had noticed him but me, and I was only a rag doll. Amber's joy knew no bounds. Her anger soon mounted again however, and stooping she picked me up and flung me across the room at Barry with some force. I had never cared greatly for that man. He had a wild eye. I caught him full on the head with all my might. The onslaught was a thorough surprise; we went down together. I split myself badly; but, oh, it was in a good cause. Dick picked me up and my stuffing fell all around him, letters, and several other articles, all from Barry before Amber's marriage.

It was very early next morning while Amber and little Dick were sleeping that Dick sat on the window seat, whistling under his breath, and sewing me up. Dick said I was to be kept in remembrance of what might have been. He put the finishing touches on me and propped me up in the window with my face from the room.

It seems only yesterday that I looked out of the window and saw a rose bud growing fat again, and now the daisies and chrysanthemums are retreating before their enemy, Winter. It's queer the way Winter keeps on coming.

Shore Rambles

THE SUN in a veil of ruddy mist slid into the sea, and it seemed to me that the restless water quenched the great flame. Overhead, faint clusters of stars sprayed the darkening sky. The sheltered cove, which I had found on one of my rambles, was gradually enfolded by groping shadows and the lowering dusk. I had followed, one late summer afternoon, the voice of the sea,

“—for the call of the running tide
Is a wild call and a clear call that may not be denied.”

But, although that summons was always urging me onward, I could not follow it forever. Reluctantly, I turned away from the ocean's magnetic beauty. Yet for an hour I had dreamed dreams and I had seen visions. Forgotten were the discomforts suffered in finding this lonely spot, and the torturous return homeward was no longer unpleasant, for I was a dreamer. It is only the staid, unimaginative scoffers who recall the disagreeable results of their wanderings. It is they, for instance, who remember the torn trousers, the aching feet, and the bruised hands, rather than the foam-crested waves, the sweeping veils of sun-lit fog, and the brilliant white sands.

Aimless ramblings along the sea-shore have always fascinated me. As far back as I can remember, I have liked to wander away from the beaten trails, day-dreaming and seeking pleasure in solitude. I find endless variety in the constantly changing sea. Some deep power in its enormity, its vastness, casts a spell over me. All that is material seems to vanish. The petty worries, the trivial emotions, and everything that complicates the present, is dwarfed by the greatness of the ocean.

It was in such surroundings one day, that I optimistically tried my literary talents. With paper, pencils, and dozens of ideas, I struggled valiantly to transfer my inspirations to paper, but a sudden dearth of words made my fancied masterpiece fade and dwindle. Each attempt was a little less satisfactory than the one before, and soon the beach was dotted with crumpled paper. When the tide came in, and the waves indifferently tossed the crushed balls from crest to crest, I disconsolately threw showers of torn paper after them.

It was only a few days after this experience that I caught my most impressive view of the sea. On this particular afternoon I had struggled to the sea shore through several miles of beautiful but almost impassable rock formations. It was the loneliest place I had ever seen. Lonesome with that horrible half-fearful "awayness" that made me feel as though I were on another planet. Not once during the entire afternoon did I see a single living thing; but always the sea, hundreds of feet below the jagged cliffs, beat fiercely against the rocks. The sighing swish of the incoming waves, their thundering crash against the rugged shore and the dull splash of the receding water—all blended into melancholy rhythmic music that fascinated and repelled me at the same time. At first this dull, reverberating boom meant nothing. But when my ears became accustomed to the different tones, its monotonous pounding was expressive. It scolded, sympathized, cajoled, and adapted itself to my thoughts. Always, though, it was maddening in its unceasing monotony. The same harsh beauty that had drawn me to the forsaken spot also drove me away.

One night, another of my rambles led me to a little sand bowl. I do not remember how I happened to go there nor why. Ahead of me, the sea was nothing but a black sheet, unfathomable, mysterious, and romantic. On this occasion my imagination carried me far. I drifted to France and struggled with her intricate language, turned missionary in Turkey, shivered in Siberia, tried to smuggle ancient treasure out of Africa, and then an inquisitive sand flea caused me to return hastily to my comfortable bowl.

Another time, one sleepy, sunshiny afternoon when I was trudging along the beach, I saw my first sea-garden. In reality it was only the sea weeds and ferns wavering under the water; but when I saw them from shore, their shimmering beauty was so dazzling that it left an indelible impression upon my mind. It was not a methodical, unnatural garden, but a swiftly changing thing that seemed to possess a decided temperament. Artistic riots of scarlet, yellow, green, and brown sprang up beneath the clear, green surfaces of the water. Gleaming pebbles flashed through the intricate network of colorful sea weeds. I returned again and again to that gay spot, fascinated by the wild profusion of color.

Even now, "in vacant or in pensive mood," I like to see in fancy the changing moods of the sea, the churning waves lashing at insensible cliffs, or the placid bay reflecting the intense blue of the sky. Only last night I recalled the gleam of the white beach in the moonlight and my summer house built of bleached drift wood.

The web of those happy days is torn and gone, but the spider weaves on, and I, like the spider, spin my fragile net of memories and recall the times I have roamed by the sea, where, like Morris,

"I would wander if I might
From dewy dawn to dewy night."

History Unveiled

In a country examination the following answer was to the question, "Who were Lewis and Clark?"

"Mr. Lewis came out and settled on the Snake River, but he finally went up to Spokane where he met Mr. Clark and together they built the Lewis and Clark
High School."

"I ate some oxtail soup and feel bully."

That's nothing. I ate some hash and I feel like everything."

I stood on the bridge at midnight,
Twas as dark as dark could be,
A man from the country came along
And hitched his horse to me.

Boy: "I am like a tree; rooted at your side."

Girl: "Yes, but you never leave."

Hubby: "My dear, all the baggage and parcels are thrust on me as though I were a porter. I tell you I'm sick of it."

She: "Have you got the grip?"

Physics

And nobody can be in two places at once—

Oh yes they can. One time I spent a week at Newman Lake and I was homesick all the time.

"Is he a consistent man?"

"I should say so; he dresses up every Sunday before he tunes in the church service."

"How'd she manage to save a million dollars?"

"She was born with a natural wave in her hair."

Sustain Your Reputation

and at the same time make selling easier for your yard men by stocking lumber that has "made good" everywhere. Hundreds of dealers swear by the natural superiority of

Idaho White Pine

Explain to your salesman how this soft wood offers big value to builders; how it works freely and evenly under the saw and plane; show them it is naturally suited to Finish, Ceiling, Siding, Case, Base, Sash, Doors, Frames, etc. All these selling points will help you land big orders and make selling easier for your men.

In addition to the above big value yard stock, we also manufacture Western White Pine, Fir, Larch, Spruce
